Democracy is important

In a democracy we make decisions together. Everyone can share their ideas and help choose what happens. People vote to pick leaders and make rules, so no one person gets to decide everything. Everyone's voice matters.

Even though you can't vote yet, you can still care about what's fair and kind. You can talk about what matters and help people around you.

You're never too young (or too old!) to make sure everyone is treated fairly. See more at:

In the picture is John Lewis, a brave man who worked hard so everyone could have the same rights and be treated fairly. He is standing in front of a big bridge where he marched to help people get the right to vote.
